GOSPEL REFLECTION

There's a key line in the last part of this gospel reading: "he who eats my flesh and drinks my blood lives in me and I live in him. As I, who am sent by the living Father, myself draw life from the Father, so whoever eats me will draw life from me." This is the crux of this passage: eternal life comes by becoming partakers in the only real eternal life, which is God's. Jesus gives us his flesh to eat and blood to drink because by doing so he literally becomes our food, and the "nutrients" of his own divine life get "absorbed" into our own bloodstream and give vitality to our souls.

But, as we know, the divine life is triune, because God is Trinity. We've seen how the Father draws us into this intimate sharing in Jesus' life, but what about the Spirit...? Remember that in the Mass it's the power of the Spirit that's called down on the bread and wine to make them the Body and Blood of Jesus.

Paul [in his epistle] reminds us that when the Father moves in our hearts, when we eat the Flesh and drink the Blood of the Son, when we're filled with the Spirit: people should sense a palpable difference in us. Do they? – Excerpted from <https://www.godwhospeaks.uk/>

REFLECTION

For our Gospel today we hear the conclusion of the “Bread of Life discourse” in the sixth chapter of John’s Gospel. In the preceding verses, which we have heard proclaimed in our liturgy over the past few weeks, we have heard Jesus explain that he is the Bread of Life, given so that those who believe may have eternal life.... This conclusion of the Bread of Life discourse focuses on personal faith in the life of Christian discipleship. Each person must make his or her own judgment about who Jesus is and in doing so determine the way of life that he or she will follow. God’s grace invites us to be Jesus’ disciples, but each person must respond to the grace of God and confess as his or her own the belief that Jesus is the one from God. This faith then commits us to the path of life, leading us to eternal life. – Excerpted from Sunday Connection, loyolapress.com
